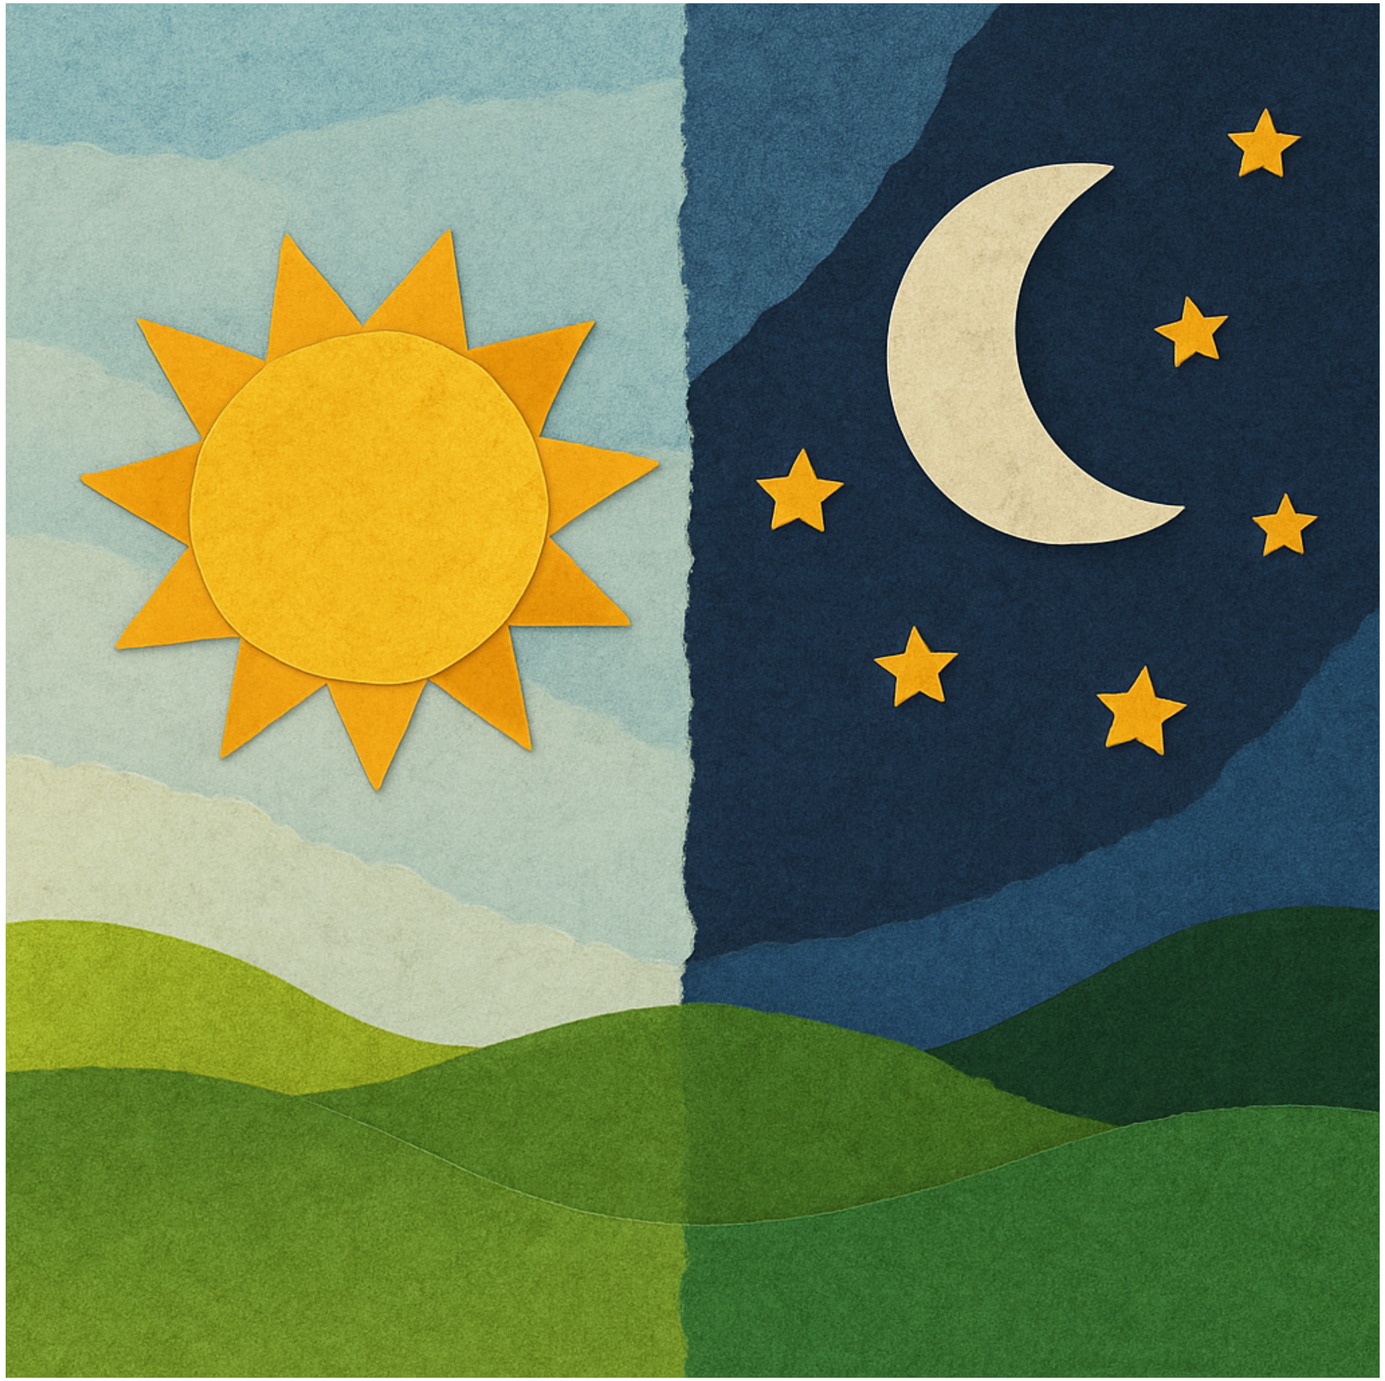
God Made
It All
Curtis Sergeant

In the beginning, God made the light,
He painted the day and tucked in the night.
Bright yellow sun, the stars so small,
The moon glows white—God made it all!

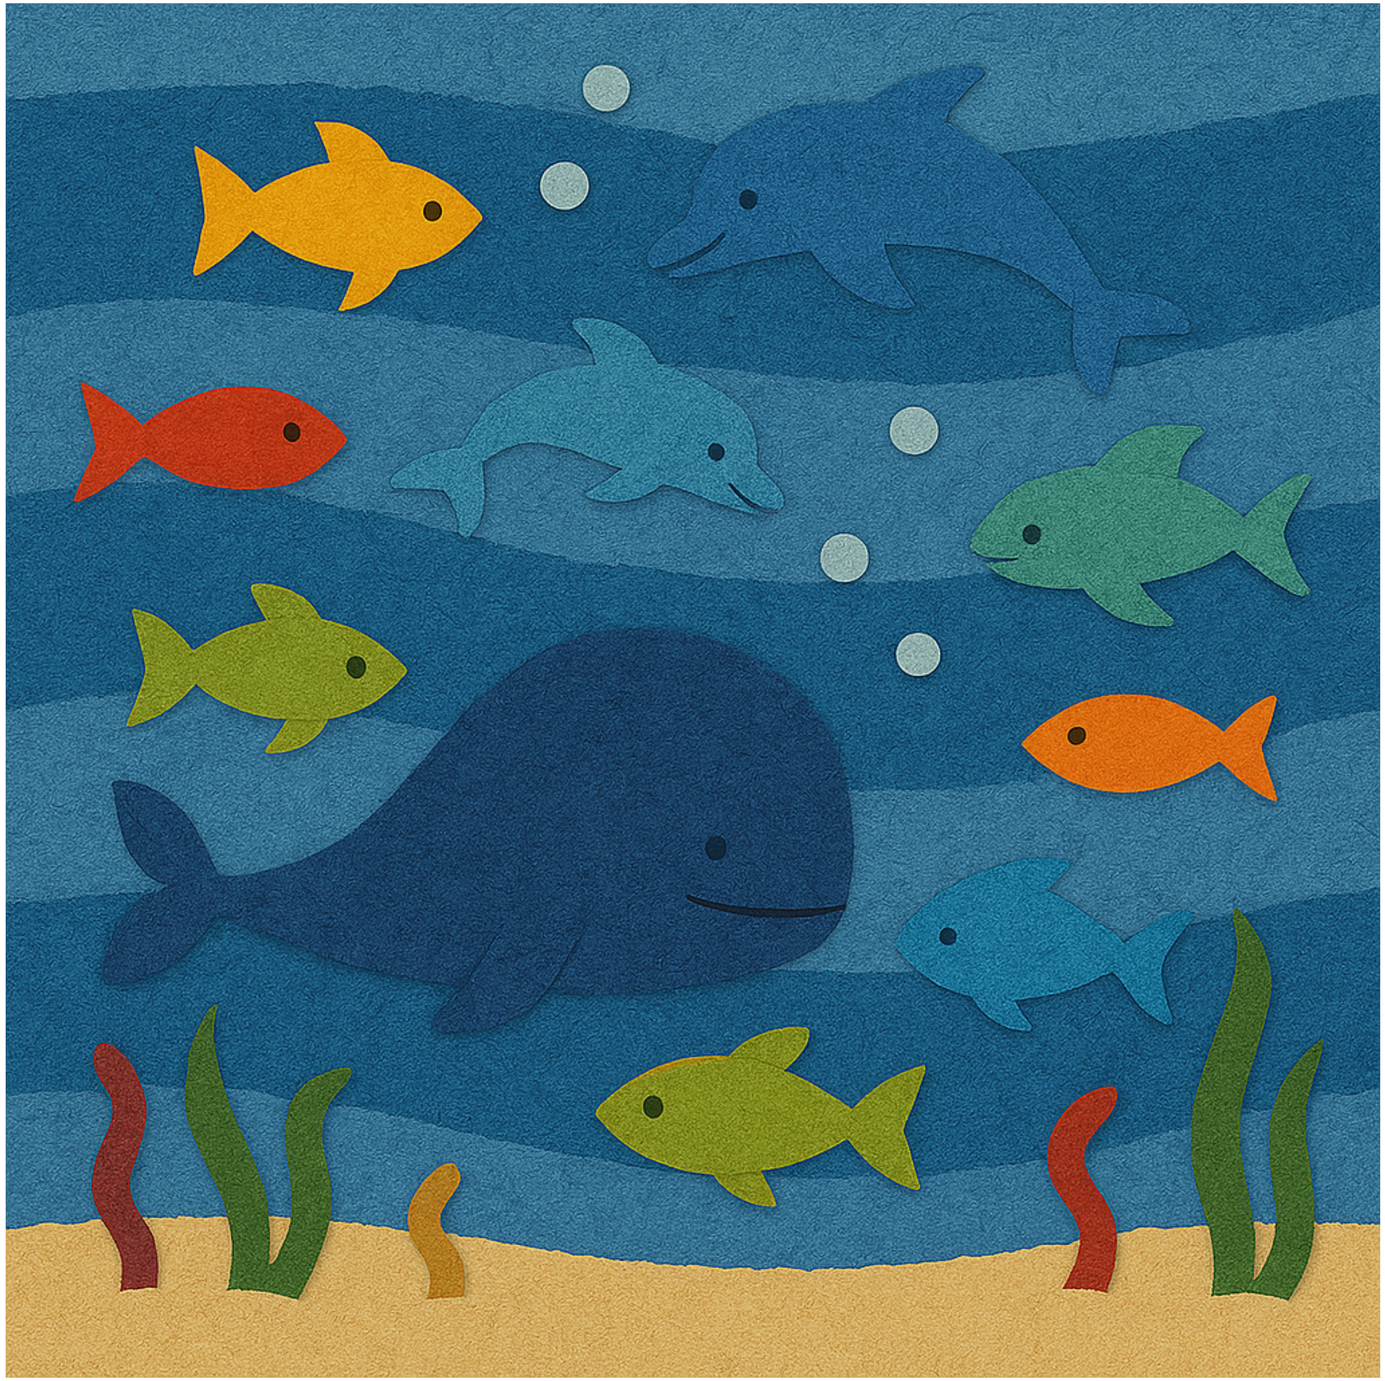


He made the sky so big and blue,
And clouds that puff and drift right through.
Rain comes down—pitter, pat fall—
And rainbows shine—God made it all!

He made the flowers red and pink,
Purple, orange, and blue, I think!
Tulips, daisies, standing tall—
Petals soft—God made them all!

God made lions, soft brown manes,
Hopping kangaroos and gentle cranes.
Big gray elephants, short and tall,
Creeping bugs—God made them all!

He filled the seas with fish that gleam,
In colors like a painted dream.
Blue whales sing and dolphins call,
Wiggly worms—God made them all!



He made the trees so strong and high,
With leafy arms that touch the sky.
Apples red and leaves that fall,
Crunchy piles—God made them all!

God made birds that chirp and sing,
With feathers bright on every wing.
Robins, owls, so big, so small,
Flying high—God made them all!

He made the hills and mountains wide,
With snowy tops and caves to hide.
Meadows soft like nature’s shawl,
Rolling fields—God made them all!

God made people, big and small,
Every face, He loves them all.
Brown and peach and pink and tan,
Each a part of His great plan!

So look around and shout with glee,
At all the things we hear and see.
From skies above to bugs that crawl—
Give thanks to God—He made it all!
